

Pink E. Burns Cabin, located at the Dugger Mountain Wilderness Trail Head is the location of this photo. There are 3 or 4 other log buildings situated here beside the main cabin. This is the corner of one of those structures; I love the way these types of buildings are held together. One log is notched out so that the shape of the next log fits perfectly into the groove. Then gravity pitches in to help bind them together, time after time the process is repeated until eventually you have a sturdy frame, and pretty soon you have yourself a home.

As I walk around this collection of logs which are placed so perfectly together, I imagine the group of people, who one day walked into the forest, chose these trees, cut them down, drug them to this spot, measured and cut them to this length, placed the notches in each one, lifted each to the spot prepared for it and placed it with such skill and care. I envision each person this day having a job to do, I can see them working together in harmony; picture the men lifting together to raise each log to the desired place and then stepping back to admire and evaluate the job they had done.

I can hear someone in the group vocalize the obvious fact that, "We can do so much when we work together!" And here I set 150 years later and say, amen. There really is no limit to what we can achieve, if we only work together. I don't know about you, but I love those two words, "Work Together". Give me teamwork, collaboration and partnership and there is no limit to what we can accomplish together. Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!

Do you see a real need or an opportunity near you today? What do we do? We find other like-minded people and work together in fellowship and partnership and soon we too will be able to step back and say, "We can do so much when we work together!" That is what life is all about; a home, a friendship, a church, teamwork, each doing their job with a desire to build up the other members. Not worrying about who gets the credit, our only concern is doing our job well and being there to help and support those who need a hand. That sounds like love to me? What about you?

Something to think about:

- We must learn to live together as brothers or perish together as fools.
- Chains do not hold a marriage together. It is threads, hundreds of tiny threads that sew people together through the years.
- United we stand, divided we fall.
- God called his people to unity, not uniformity.
- Coming together is a beginning; keeping together is progress; working together is success.
- The human body is probably the most amazing example of teamwork anywhere. Every part needs the other; When the stomach is hungry, the eyes spot the hamburger; The nose smells the onions, the feet run to the snack stand, the hands douse the burger with mustard and shove it back into the mouth, where it goes down to the stomach. Now that's cooperation!
